BOST. ADDRESS - 90-94 STATE STREET.

11 90-94 State Street Built in 1891 by architect Willard T. Sears, 90-94 State Street is distinctive for its nine-story, curved corner facade, reflecting the building's key location at the intersection of the State Street and Merchants Row. The curve is accentuated by the inventive round-arched window at the second story, ornamented by a carved stone frame.

BOST. ADDRESS - 126 STATE STREET -

21 126 State Street was designed by the prominent architects, Peabody and Stearns, in 1902 for the Cunard Steamship Company. The shipping motif appears in several places: anchors ornament ground and second floors, nautical symbols appear between the upper-story windows and the lions of the British Empire guard the upper cornice.

Boston. Address. 450 Summer Street

To visit the Office Pavilion in South Boston is to visit the theater. For tucked in a historic warehouse there is a Herman Miller showroom that could double as a multilevel stage. The stage's scenery is spectacular—floors, walls, and columns unusually colored and textured by local artists.

The Boston architecture firm of Jung/Brannen Associates wanted to create an environment that would make a lasting impression on the customers. And from the beginning the 9,300 square feet of raw space seemed ideal for the theatrical metaphor, particularly since the main space has two levels—one an open space with a 14½-foot ceiling and the other a mezzanine 9½ feet high. . . .
